

Highlights

- SAR imaging quality (NESZ, resolution) integrated as MOO objectives in scheduling
- G-BL-seeded NSGA-III reveals an empirical saturation boundary for SAR quality
- Third objective density-dependent: distinct at sparse, saturating at high density
- Multi-objective advantage concentrates in sparse regimes ($N \leq 100$)
- G-BL-seeded MOEAs converge to a common coverage ceiling at high density