Highlights

- Imaging quality (NESZ, resolution) added as multi-objective scheduling targets
- Quality gain shrinks with target density; negligible beyond N = 150 targets
- Third objective adds +40% (NESZ-ordering index) at sparse density, 15% coverage cost
- Quality edge contracts with agility: greedy suffices under narrow squint envelopes